PMP is still going strong and sending moral-boosting letters to the political prisoners. The kind words we get are like first-aid supplies air-dropped into a combat zone behind enemy lines. Thank you, thank you, thank you!

This is first and foremost an information war. And each one of our trials is a big propaganda show from the enemy. Their goal is to demoralize you all out there, by demoralizing us few in here. That's always the goal in war - to demoralize your enemy and subjugate them.

It's really sad that the Feds see the American People as an enemy they need to beat down and control. It's really really sad.

But we're going to win this! The American spirit is not a flame that's easily snuffed out. Our values are good. Our ideologies are enduring! What we stand for is already woven into the human DNA: Freedom, kindness, mutual respect. Those are natural to us. Everyone likes them.

What we're up against is lazy, spoiled, thuggish, entitled, arrogant officialdom. You can't sell these rotten values to self-respecting American people no matter how hard you try. They're just naturally repulsive. Nobody likes the values the Feds embrace. Not even the Feds like them! That's why they are all in it for themselves and constantly eating each other alive.

We don't have to fight this behemoth of short sighted corruption. It's a self-destructing train wreck. And we we don't have to forcefully advance our live-and-let-live, love your neighbor, values. People naturally long for what we are promoting. The human heart wants to be able to think for its self, provide for its self, and defend its self. So we can just let Nature take its course. The mere fact that so many of us can understand what's going on means the victory is already in the bag. So cheers to that!

With that said, I see that the P3 Ranchers in Nevada pretty much won their trial and are now headed for a re-trial. I'm not going to give them any advice. My advice is to all the people out there supporting them. Here it is: Don't tell the guys who are going to a re-trial what to do. Let them make their own choices without pressure from us. We need to just love and encourage them and support them in whatever they choose. Because each situation is different.

Most likely, the prosecutors will start offering them plea deals. Testifying against others to get yourself out of jail is a serious sin. That goes without saying. But if you beat the Feds at their own rigged show trial, and they offer you a plea deal that allows them to save some face and you to go home, it's not right or wrong to take the plea. So we'll be on your side whatever you decide to do.

If you want to stand up to the Tyrants like William Wallace (Braveheart) and never give them an inch, then so be it. I respect you and I support you in that. And I know that whatever time and torture they throw at you, you'll take it like a man. And you'll make us all proud!

If you want to throw the Feds a bone by pleading out so you can go home, that's okay too. It's not good for the movement to see their heroes get 20 or 30 years. It scares people. So there is a tactical advantage - for the cause - if your plea gets you out. You survived, avoided prison, and kept your pride. That's a victory that will outweigh a timeserved plea. Your supporters will be less demoralized in the long run, and you can do a lot of good and help a lot of people since you're out. You'll also be able to pass on your knowledge of how informants, trials, and psy-ops work. You're a seasoned veteran now. For people to see you in the flesh, alive, well, and unbroken is worth a lot.

If you've got a wife or a child that need need you out to take care of them, that's a big factor that deserves consideration too.

Don't betray your heart. Don't betray your country. Don't betray your friends. And don't cooperate with Feds who have. Beyond that, make your own decisions, and know that we're behind you.

That's what I'd say. And I wouldn't go much beyond that.

- PS: Don't take a plea that agrees to "facts" that will be used against others. And get all plea agreements in writing and approved by the judge in writing before you agree to anything.

I know of an elderly couple who were both told "if you plea out, we'll let your spouse out." They both plead guilty and they both went to prison, and the prosecutor just laughed at tricking them, because the offer wasn't in writing or signed off on by the judge.
